LAWYERS IN A HOT DEBATE

Are Very Much Worried Over the Matter of Criminal Appeal.

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION ADJOURNS

Judge Brewer's Position Against the Freedom of Appeals in Criminal Cases Provoked an Animated Discussion Among Members.

DETROIT, Aug. 30 .- At the meeting of the American Bar association this morning the chusetts; secretary, John Hinkley, Maine; treasurer, Francis Rawley, Pennsylvania; executive committee, George A. Mercer of Georgia, Alfred R. Eminway of Massachusetts, and Charles Claffin Allen of Missouri. The secretary read the selections of the grand council for vice president and members of the local council of the various states. The nomination of officers by the grand council were subsequently unanimously confirmed. The only exciting discussion during the convention occurred in its closing session. It arose over the following resolution, which was offered by Austin Abbott:

which was offered by Austin Abbott:

Resolved. That the committee on judicial administration and remedial procedure be requested to consider the subject of delays in criminal cases resulting through existing systems of review, by repeal or otherwise, so clearly brought to view by the paper of Mr. Justice Brewer, and that the committee be requested to present at the next meeting some recommendations as a remedy therefor.

A strong sentiment of opposition was immediately developed to Justice Brewer's po-sition on the question of criminal appeals. which was understood to mean that criminal cases should end in a trial court, and no appeals be permitted. George M. Forrester of Washington moved stake. It seemed to be the general opinion among the delegates that Justice Brewer had not expressed himself on the subject with entire clearness. Abbott finally accepted the amendment to his resolution, striking out the wards "so clearly brought to view by the paper of Mr. Justice Brewer," and simply referring the amended resolution to the committee on judicial procedure and remedial legislation. with directions to report next year. LAWYERS AS LEADERS.

There was a fair attendance at this afterncon's meeting of the section of legal edu-cation. Rev. Lyman Abbott of Brocklyn delivered an interesting extemporaneous address on "The Relation of Law to Our National Development." In the course of his remarks Dr. Abbott said that the lawyers were the leaders of the nation. Aristotle had given three forms of government, but the Americaus had added another, viz., self-government, a high form of free government. "The indecision of the supreme court decided that the income tax was constitutional; then came the reversal. Why? Because we recognize here self-government. Law is not a command addressed from a superior to an infector officer. It is the corporate will of the nation addressed to the insividual. More than half the legis-lators in congress have been lawyers, and it ought to be so. They are the men best fitted for the task. 'Tis ours as ministers to present the highest ideals, not to shape policies. Wherever the clergy have tried this they have failed, whether in Roman ecclesiastical bodies, in other churches, or in some American re-ligious gatherings which it would be hard to distinguish from political bodies. The edu-cation of the lawyer cannot be too broad nor too deep to equip him for his great responsi-

Dr. N. S. Davis of Chicago, dean of the Northwestern university, read a paper on particularly bright, took him home with the urisprudence by Students of Law, and the Extent to Which it Should Be Taught Schools or Colleges for the Education of Such Students." He strongly outlined the value of the principles of medicine as applied to the various branches of legal work, in determining the nature of evidences of crime, of official neglect, etc. Their value in this con-nection, he said, was apparent. He reviewed the early history of medical jurisprudence since physicians were first required to testify as experts in trials at law.

MEDICAL EDUCATION NEEDED.

At present, he continued, no medical school is recognized that does not give its students full instructions in medical furispradence. If the facts in question belong strictly to the demain of medicine, how could the of law without having any med cal knowledge state them clearly? Without this the attorney often failed to ask the question which would elicit the true facts and wast d time in irrelevant discussion of the question. By so doing he would only inflict injury on hi profession. The law student should not be taught the details of medical science, but he should acquaint himself with the natural physical consequences of criminal acts and of neglect where life and health are concerned also with the various stages of in anity and incompetency. It would not require de tailed or clinical work, but every annual course of instruction should commence with at least six lectures on anatomy, digestion, respiration and other organic actions, etc. Eight lessons of one hour eigh should be taught during the legal course, the entire course including about twenty-four hours de-voted to medical learning. "Four-fifths of those who annually enter the legal profession without medical knowledge. tice has often demonstrated that a knowledge of medical jurisprudence is absolutely neces-Nearly all the topics in the study of medical jurisprudence, he said, were applica-ble to the needs of the class in law. It wathe common ground upon which both profes-sions could meet, and a necessary feature in furthering the public he ith, part ching a ciety and in the administration of justice.

After a discussion of Dr. Davis' paper from different standpoints the section adjourned after having adopted a resolution offered by Dr. Henry Wade Rogers, president of the Northwestern university, recommending that the American Bar association approve the lengthening of the course of instruction in law schools to three years, and also expressing the hope that laws may be enacted in each state requiring a three years' course by cond'dates for admission to the bar before making application for examination.

The gathering of the legal fraternity clused enight with the annual dinner at the Hotel Cadillac. The affair was exclusive to members of the association, not even representatives of the press being admitted. Serious topics were laid aside and story-telling and mirth characterized the final meeting.

How Baker Explains It.

Ollie Baker is once more in trouble. He was arrested at the instance of A. Sanger, a pawnbroker at 1109 Douglas street, and was with being a suspicious character. The real object of the arrest, however, was to afford him an opportunity to explain how he came into the possession of a certain saddle. The saddle was stolen from Sanger's store almost two years ago. Sanger yester-day saw it in Baker's possession and at once jumped to the conclusion that Haker was very near by when it was stolen. Baker says that he obtained the saddle in a horse trade some months ago, and that consequently other fellow must have stolen it if it

AZOTE CUTS FLEETWOOD'S TIME. Lowers the Track Record and Does the Uphill Quarter in 0:31. NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Brilliant trotting marked the closing day of the Fleetwood grand circuit meeting, Azote turning the track in 2:0512 in an exhibition against time, while Nightingale, the 10-year-old daughter of Mambrino King, won the best race in her long career as a campaigner, defeating her long career as a campaigner, defeating Geneva. Altao, Colonel Kuser and other cracks of the 2:11 class. Geneva and Colonel Kuser finished within a length of the winner in the last heat, trotting better than 2:10. Nightingale wen each heat by outnishing Geneva and the others in the home stretch. Azote was driven by McHenry in his exhibition against time, Andy McDowell having gone on to Toledo with Alix for a similar exhibition today. The first quarter was trotted in thirty and one-fourth seconds and the second quarter, the fastest of the track, was covered in thirty-two and one-half seconds, a 2:10 gait. Coming up the hill in the third quarter McHenry cut the big fellow loose. He steeped the distance in thirty-one seconds, faster than any horse ever covered the same ground before. This effort numped Azote, and his finish was very weak, the time for the last quarter being thirty-two and a half seconds. It was the greatest performance on record from the horseman's point of view, for with the wenther conditions, a cold, brisk wind blowing, the track slow and the horse badly rattled, he was handleapped more than two seconds.
